

Day 22
April 15

A Thorny
Bush

Or

A Fragrant
Flower?

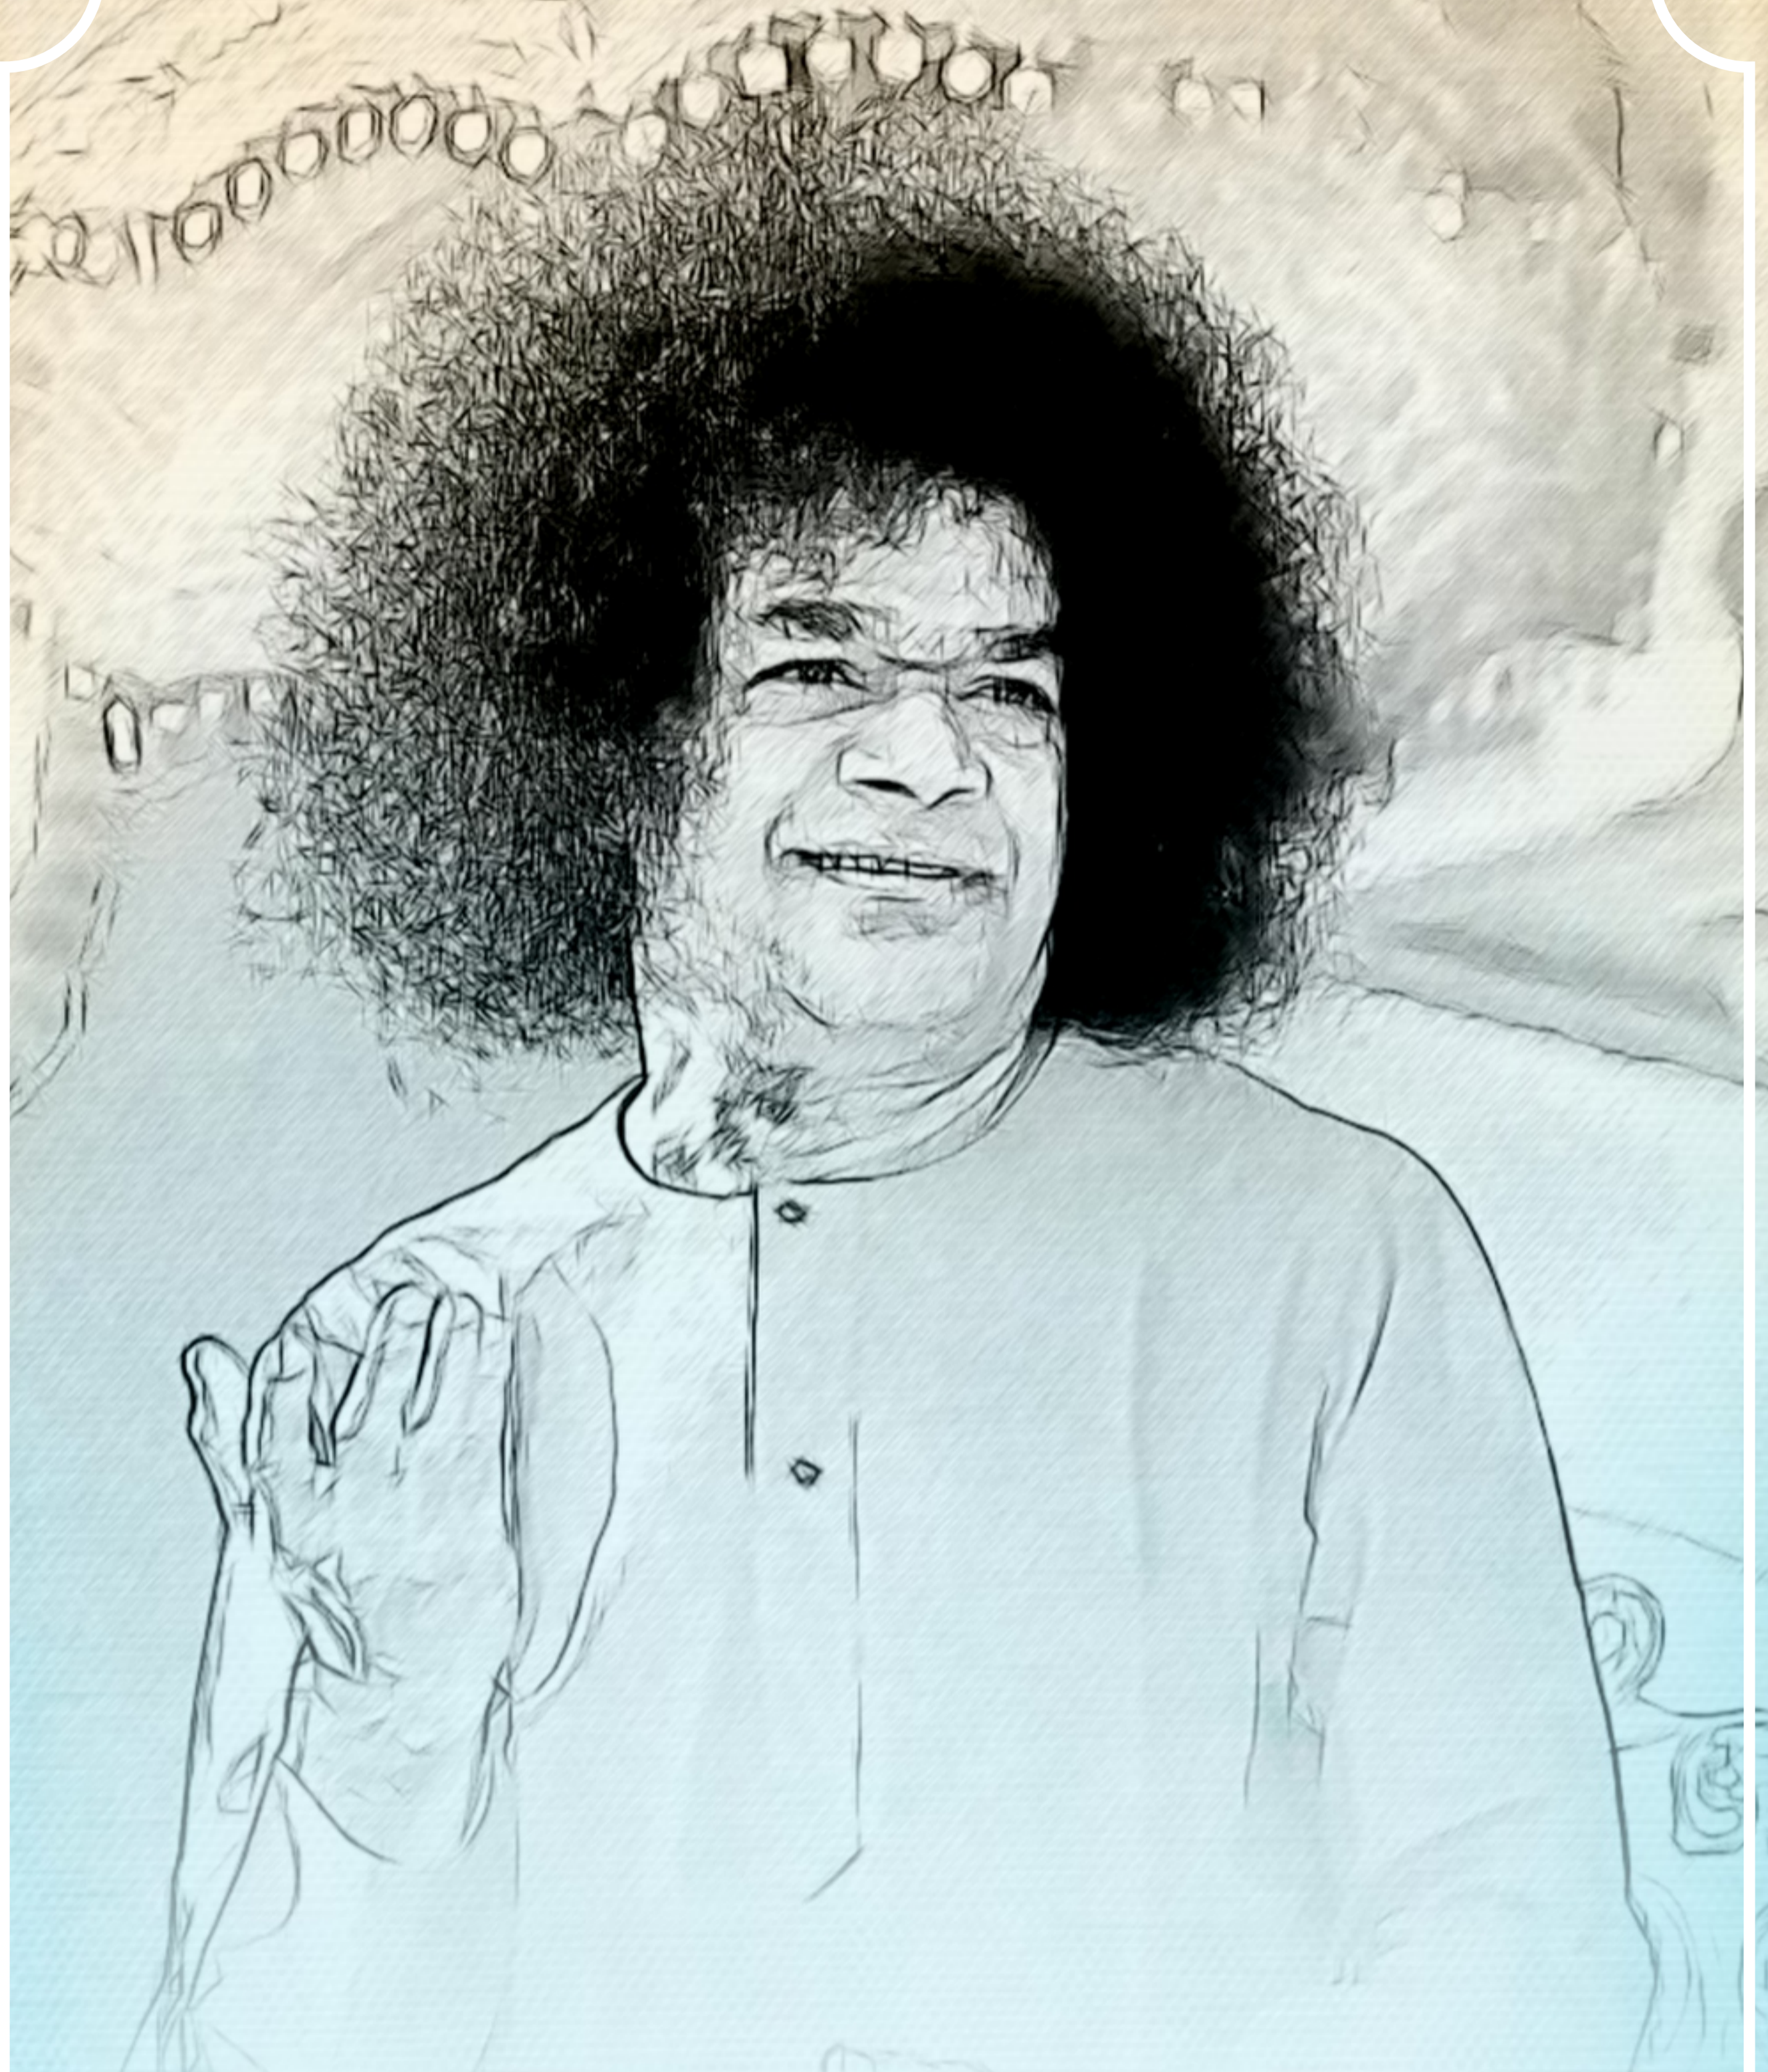

BE DIVINE...SEE AND SERVE DIVINITY

INVOKE, EVOKE, INVOLVE, EVOLVE

FROM EXTERNAL TEMPORARY TO INTERNAL INFINITY

On this day, let us make a choice...whether we would like to be a thorny bush that harms or a fragrant flower that is always a joy to behold.

- Anger is an energy drain, with Love...we forever gain.
- When confronted, take a few seconds to reflect -
- Are we attempting to enhance self-control or submitting to impulsive reactions? A bush of thorns or a fragrant flower?
- Each one has developed a different perspective depending on their sequential experiences and samskaras.
- Consequently, when it comes to opinions and choices, points of view and beliefs people express, we need to respect, accept, adjust, appreciate...that it's different strokes for different folks! Only then, harmony will reign supreme.
- Accepting one's fault brims harmony, a natural outcome of humility. Humility is strength not a weakness.
- Arrogance fuelled by ego ignites discontent for all.
- Whereas, Love is that angelic flow that simplifies matters, lightens a tense environment...unifies and reconciles. Anger wrecks, Love builds bridges and helps us evolve.
- Humility, reverence, compassion, forbearance, sacrifice and self-control are the qualities that reveal the outcome of true education. - Baba

- Armed with self-control, shall we immerse ourselves yet again in this wondrous frequency of selfless love today...and stay away from frivolous engagements, reactions, excessive indulgences, grudges, blame games or judging others?
- Let us be receptive to Bhagawan's Infinite Love and constantly -
